“With generosity, grace, and humility Ms. Ewing has helped raise the standing and standards of her profession through her passionate willingness to share her insights, understanding, and awareness with a full range of audiences, and especially with practicing architects and aspiring students. And through her own practice as well as her tireless service to architecture and society she enhances the connections between people – the built environment – and the world we live in... every day. Allison was a key contributor to two of the most meaningful programs I led while at Hanley Wood; as Chair of Design in our Vision 2020 Sustainability Research Initiative, and as a judge for The Hanley Award For Vision and Leadership In Sustainability. We all are better for knowing her.” - Rick Schwolsky, Senior Fellow, Architecture 2030

Jurists were: “enamored by The Lewis and Clark Exploratory Center’s elegance of detail and deep respect for its context. The project achieves a striking balance with a strong form that remains deferential to its landscape, and should be commended for the difficulty inherent in achieving this.”
